DOUGLAS BOOMED FOR 2D PLACE

CONVENTION WAITS BRYAN'S ORDERS

New York Declares for Gaynor, While Folk, Mitchell, Gray, James and a Dozen Others Have Their Booms.

DENVER, Col., July 10.—When Permanent Chairman Clayton called the Democratic National Convention to order this afternoon a dozen or more lively Vice-Presidential booms were rampant on the floor, but, as far as the rank and file of the delegates knew, the stamp of Bryan's approval had been set upon no one of them, and the outlook was extremely uncertain.

That the Nebraska leader, who had been nominated for President with practical unanimity and amid a night convention scene of frenzied enthusiasm, could pick his own running mate if he chose was conceded.

The convention 'hour was 1 o'clock, but the delegates, worn out from the stress of the all-night session, were slow in assembling in the big auditorium.

The New York delegation to-day adopted the boom of Judge William J. Gaynor, of Brooklyn for the Presidency. Norman W. Littleton or Senator Thomas F. Grady, it was expected, would make the speech nominating Governor Gaynor in the convention.

Judge George Gray's name was on the tongue of every delegate and he could have had the nomination by acclamation if the convention felt sure he would take it.

JAMES BOOM MUCH ALIVE.

Congressman Ollie James of Kentucky, whose seconding speech for Bryan last night threw the convention into a rumpus, has much strength. He is a popular hero in the convention. Young, strenuous, natural and a red-hot Bryan man, the delegates like him. His supporters rely upon his attractive personality to win him the prize.

Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri was regarded by many of the wise ones as Bryan's real choice, and the statement that he would accept if nominated started a boom of large elected proportions for the famous anti-graft sensation.

John Mitchell, the miner, was also well liked. He is to the frame of mind of the immortal Barkis: he is "willin'." Among the politicians Mitchell is regarded as one of the strongest mentioned for the place. With the anti-injunction plank in the platform it was believed that the ticket thousands leader would bring to the polls needed votes in States where they are needed.

John W. Kern of Indiana was also spoken of with considerable favor and his friends were booming him hard.

DOUGLAS HAS MANY FRIENDS.

In the East Archbald McNeill of Connecticut seems to have the strongest following, but he was not generally regarded as having much of any chance for the prize.

Ex-Governor Douglas of Massachusetts has many friends here, and a good fight by Massachusetts would put him well toward the front.

LONDON REGARDS BRYAN'S CHANCE OF ELECTION SLIGHT

LONDON, July 10.—Scattering editorial comments to-day on the nominating of William Jennings Bryan agree that his chances for victory over William Howard Taft are slender, but better than in either of his previous campaigns or that of Alton B. Parker four years ago.

The English feeling toward Bryan has changed greatly since his world tour, on which he created a good impression in this country. Several references are made to him to-day as already, if not quite, the equal of President Roosevelt.

EX-DEMOCRATIC SENATOR BETS TWO TO ONE ON TAFT

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 10.—Secretary Loeb to-day received a letter from a former Democratic United States Senator, who said he had written to Chairman Thomas Taggart of the Democratic National Committee offering to bet $10,000 to $5,000 that Taft would be elected, and the same amount at the same odds that Bryan would not carry New York state. Mr. Loeb refused to give the former Senator's name.

NEW ENGLAND MEN ON COMMITTEE TO NOTIFY BRYAN

DENVER, July 10.—The committee appointed to notify William J. Bryan of his nomination for President includes the following men from New England States:

Maine—Frank M. Major.
Massachusetts—Timothy O'Sullivan.
New Hampshire—J. C. Hutchins.
Rhode Island—P. H. Kelly.
Connecticut—Harry C. Wyp.

MORE ICEMEN FINED IN COURT

For failing to weigh ice when requested to do so by customers four Malden ice men were fined $5 each by Judge Bruce in the Malden District Court this morning. Abraham Cohen was the only driver provided with scales, but these were not in working order and Judge Bruce fined him $5. The other three drivers were John Chiarenzi of Everett, driver for M. Hunter & Son; Frank McComb of Malden, driver for Samuel Hanson of Malden, and John Steele, driver for Samuel Cohen of Malden.

LOSES HIS SAVINGS, THEN LOSES MIND

LOWELL, July 10.—Frank E. Beede, formerly a telegraph operator, was arraigned to-day and pronounced insane. Beede recently lost $1,500 in stock speculation. This was the savings of his lifetime, and the loss affected his mind. He has a wife and two children.

Gray Telegraphs Congratulations

WILMINGTON, Del., July 10. — Judge George Gray sent the following telegram to-day to William J. Bryan at Fairview:

"Accept my hearty congratulations.

"GEORGE GRAY."

BRANDS SON AND HAILS HIM AS "MESSIAH"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 10.—With his face seared in five places by a branding iron, one of his eyes disordered by a blow and five rings cut around his throat, six-year-old Charles Goodsell Jr. in Bellevue Hospital under treatment. His mother, Mrs. Georgiana Goodsell, pretty and refined and twenty-six years old, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Coday, fifty-three, are in the hospital, pschypotable ward prisoners, under observation, suspected of suffering from religious mania.

The women are under the particular observation of Drs. Holmes and Gregory, and the former stated this afternoon that the case bade fair to be one of the most remarkable on record in the history of the hospital.

The boy asserts that his mother branded him. She admits it, and told the police of the West Sixty-eighth street station that she did it because the end of the world is imminent, that her boy is to be the Messiah, and that she did not wish him to be mistaken for any one else when the day of resurrection came.

"He is to be the new Christ," the woman said, "and when he rises from the dead I want him to be known by the marks I have put on his face and neck."

It was said by the police that Mrs. Goodsell had a husband in Maine, whom she left three weeks ago. The husband would not take up with the woman's religious ideas. She is supposed to have brought the boy and her mother with her to New York.

TORPEDO BOAT ON ROCKS.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 10.—A Russian torpedo boat was wrecked in the Gulf of Finland to-day by running on the rocks off Reval. The crew was saved by vessels in the vicinity.

Watch Tomorrow's Paper for Big Treasure Clew

Money Man Is Making It Easier for American Readers to Find Keys That Turn to Gold.

BY "THE MONEY MAN."

I told you yesterday to be on the lookout for A PARTICULARLY BIG CLEW TO-MORROW. I'm going a little further to-day and suggest that SOUTH BOSTON might be a very profitable place in which to spend the half-holiday.

In the first Key Edition of the paper, issued shortly after noon to-morrow, there will be a still better tip for "Hidden—Not Lost" readers.

To-day's chapter of the story is veined with gold. The clews are not too hard to discourage the average keen reader and not too easy to engage the skill of the shrewdest Sherlock Holmes. The rewards range from $5 to $1,000.

SEARCH FOR THE ELUSIVE KEY.

Also be on the lookout for the jokes of your friends. The city has been strewn with fake keys. Don't let that disturb you.

WHEN YOU GET THE RIGHT ONE THERE CAN BE NO ERROR.

To women readers—Have you decided the identity of Madame Alvarez? Do it at once and suggest the best ending to the story. The first to do this will get an $850 Miller player piano. The second and third get gold watches.

The mystery story is on page 7.

INVESTIGATES LIGHTING BIDS

Investigating street lighting conditions in Boston and with special reference to the bids recently submitted for a five-years' lighting contract by the Rising Sun Street Lighting Company and the Cleveland Street Lighting Company, coupled with the offer of the Edison Illuminating Company to light the city's streets, the Finance Commission to-day questioned Superintendent of Streets Guy Emerson and Acting Lamp Commissioner Edward C. Wade. The contract will not be awarded until the Finance Commission has made its report.

THE WEATHER.

Showers late to-night and Saturday. Light, variable winds.

High tide 8 a. m., 8:30 p. m.

Sun rises 4:17 a. m., sets 7:22 p. m.

SERVIAN KING IN DEATH PERIL

VIENNA, July 10.—Rumors of a most startling revolutionary development in Servia reached Vienna to-day. King Peter is concentrating troops at Belgrade, the Servian capital, to repel the threatened attack.

The loyalty of these troops is doubted and King Peter is in a state of fear bordering on collapse. There are rumors that the same fate awaits the royal household as befel King Alexander and his Queen, Draga, who were slain in the palace five years ago by high officials of the army in league with the palace guards.

HUB GIRL EXILED BY R. I. OFFICIALS

PROVIDENCE, July 10.—Louise Campbell of Boston, well dressed, youthful and beaming with smiles, charged with loitering in the business section, pleaded guilty and then Judge Lee exiled her to Massachusetts. She was escorted to the first Boston-bound train by a probation officer and her face was paid.

SHARE IN BAKER ESTATE.

The value of little Natalie Burd's share in the Baker estate was fixed at $25,000, according to the bond filed in probate office by her father, George B. Burd, who was appointed administrator of his child's estate.

1 DEAD, 4 INJURED AS ENGINE HITS TROLLEY

FATAL ACCIDENT AT GRADE CROSSING AT PORTSMOUTH, N. H.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 10.—One person was killed, four were seriously injured and eight others were saved by jumping or being thrown when a switching engine on the southern division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, backing up, crashed into a trolley car at Bartlett's Crossing, near the centre of the city, at 1.20 o'clock this afternoon.

DEAD.

Chamberlain, Mrs. Joseph, No. 29 Maplewood street, Portsmouth.

INJURED.

Chamberlain, Joseph, badly crushed and may die.
Walsh, Roy, a boy, Portsmouth, badly cut and bruised.
Unknown woman, bruised; unconscious.
Unknown man, crushed; unconscious.

The trolley, No. 42, was on the loop line of the Portsmouth Electric Street Railway. It left Market square at 1.15 o'clock. C. E. Hayes was the motorman and C. F. Tucker the conductor. When passing at rapid speed down a slight incline, near the railroad crossing, the trolley flew off and the car ran straight into the path of the engine.

The locomotive in charge of Oliver Goodsmith, engineer, was backing up toward the crossing and drawing a string of empty freight cars. There was a flagman at the crossing, Thomas Watkins, and he says he did everything possible to warn both engineer and motorman, but was baffled out in an instant. Her husband, who had been beside her in the car, fell a few feet from her.

Physicians and ambulances were summoned and policemen were placed in charge at the scene. The injured were taken to hospitals.

PARTY LEADER QUITS BRYAN TO AID TAFT

HOLYOKE, July 10.—Simultaneously with the announcement of the nomination of William Jennings Bryan as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, Edward J. Kenney, a former member of the House of Representatives, announced his retirement from the Democratic party for the party of Taft and Sherman. His reasons for deserting the Democratic party he gave in this language:

"I am out for the Republican national ticket because the workingmen of Holyoke will have more and steadier employment under the Taft and Sherman administration than under Bryan and anybody else he selects for his running mate. When it comes to that the peerless accumulator of wealth could not do better than come to Holyoke for his second in command and appoint T. Calahan, a loyal friend.

"The day of side-board party fealty and service has long since gone by, in practice at least if not in profession. No longer is it accepted that because a man says he is a Republican or a Democrat he is one or the other truly. The Democrat goes along the street to-day, punches out the glad hand for the Democratic candidate and then goes into the booth and causes his conscience for the duplicity exhibited by giving the Republican candidate a single cross with the finest marking lead pencil he can find.

"I am going to stand right where everybody will know where Kenney is. Taft and Sherman will be elected, and I am going to be in the band wagon for a full day's work, the full dinner pail and full pay. Anybody Roosevelt recommends is good enough for me, and so I am unqualifiedly for Taft. It is true that I would have liked to see Crane become be was a Republican, but I had a good man in his place and had a whole rainbow chaser. I thought my course against Crane was right then. I know I am right now.

"I have seen the light since the Crane time and have been convinced that the only consistent Democrats are to be found in the mountains of Kentucky and in Denver just now. Why, the real dinner pail men have about as much chance with the present Democratic shouters as a 'come on' has with a lot of green goods men. I am looking for nothing but the best interests of the people of Holyoke and in this connection myself. I am an unqualified and undressed Republican."

QUINCY WOMAN ON TRIAL IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 10.—Frederick Clark of Mariners' Harbor, S. I., who pleaded guilty to perjury, was sentenced to-day to six months in the Richmond County Jail. Mrs. Ethel Whitney, whom Clark is said to have brought on from Quincy, Mass., refused to plead guilty with him and will stand trial.

TUMULTUOUS SCENE AS BRYAN IS NOMINATED

CONVENTION VOTE IS MADE UNANIMOUS

Hats, Flags and Banners Are Thrown in Air in Frenzy as the Result Is Announced.

AFTER ALL NIGHT SESSION

DENVER, Col., July 10.—Amid a scene almost beyond parallel in the history of national conventions, William Jennings Bryan was for the third time made the national standard bearer of the Democratic party.

From the conclusion of the speech of Ignatius J. Dunn of Nebraska, placing the Commoner's name before the convention, until the conclusion of the rollcall which nominated him, the tumult was tremendous.

Every visitor and delegate had been provided with American flags. These were unfurled at the conclusion of Dunn's speech, and as long as the monster demonstration continued, hats, flags and handkerchiefs were waved from every nook in the hall.

To minimize the Friday superstition, the hands of the Auditorium clock had been stopped at midnight.

Bryan was named for President at 3:42 (Denver time), after an all-night session.

Before the secretary had compiled the vote Representative Hammond of Minnesota, who had named Governor John A. Johnson, moved to make the nomination unanimous. He was quickly followed by Delaware, Georgia and other States which had cast votes for either Gray or Johnson. The motion prevailed. With a whoop the convention adjourned until 1 o'clock to-day.

BRYAN GOT 892 1-2 VOTES.

The vote stood 892½ for Bryan, 59½ for Gray and 46 for Johnson.

It was a strenuous session, the one which was set for 7 o'clock last night, and which ended in the overwhelming triumph of Mr. Bryan. When the time was set it was expected that the platform committee would be ready to report at 7 o'clock. It was not ready, and it was nearly an hour after the time set when the convention was ripe to order.

In the meantime the crowd, both delegates and gallery, were in for a good time. They all realized that the real work of the convention was to be done, and there was an air of suppressed excitement which vented itself in cheers and songs, and on the part of some of almost hysterical cheering.

BRYAN HEARS THE CHEERING.

In anticipation of the night's important work, telephone connection had been made between the convention hall and Fairview, Mr. Bryan's Lincoln home, and the "Commoner" was in actual touch with the wonderful manifestation of his great popularity hundreds of miles away from him.

Besides the naming of Mr. Bryan for the presidency, the convention adopted the party's declaration of principles, thus clearing the way for the final act of the convention, the naming of a running mate for Mr. Bryan. This will be done at a session which is slated for 1 o'clock this afternoon. It is the prevalent belief that Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri will be the convention's choice.

The fireworks started early. For when the roll call was begun Alabama gave way to Nebraska, and I. J. Dunn took the stand to place Bryan in nomination.

CONVENTION GOES FRANTIC.

He is a fine speaker and had the crowd with him at the start. He reached the climax of his speech and placed in nomination Nebraska's gifted son, William Jennings Bryan.

That was as far as he got. The whole auditorium went wild, and for just one hour and fourteen minutes pandemonium reigned in the hall. It was the usual convention demonstration with much more than the usual fervor.

That it would have outlasted the great demonstration started by Senator Gore's allusion to Bryan on the previous day is certain had not Chairman Clayton employed the sergeants-at-arms to end it, and assisted them by putting out the lights.

Only New York, New Jersey, Minnesota, Georgia and Delaware remained unmoved. Then came a few seconding speeches and then Representative Hammond of Minnesota, the only Democratic Representative in his State, was recognized to name Governor Johnson. This he did in an eloquent speech extolling the merits of his man as a candidate.

23 MINUTES FOR JOHNSON.

On the first mention of Governor Johnson's name, Minnesota and Georgia, assisted by the galleries and a few scattering delegates, demonstrated for the Minnesota man for twenty-three minutes and would have kept it up had Chairman Clayton not suppressed them. It was a rush light to the sun as compared to the preceding Bryan demonstration.

Connecticut gave Johnson the chance to get into the game early. Irving P. Hamden, who placed Judge Gray in nomination, had a hard time of it. He was frequently interrupted by the crowd becoming impatient. Just as he had got into the swing of his argument for the Delaware jurist, the Platform Committee started up and he had to stop until the committee was seated on the platform. He then resumed his speech and it was a good one. Delaware did not try to start anything in the way of a demonstration.

Governor Charles N. Haskell of Oklahoma, chairman of the Platform Committee, read the party's confession of faith. It was followed with the keenest interest by the delegates and the popular planks were liberally applauded.

There was no minority report and no delay in adopting it by acclamation and, the chairman announced, unanimously. Then occurred one of the unpleasant incidents of the convention.

John E. Lamb of Indiana was recognized for the purpose of offering a resolution requesting that the centennial of Lincoln's birthday be properly celebrated throughout the country. Chairman Clayton, after calling for the ayes, declared that as the son of a Confederate soldier and former slaveholder he would not put the negative on such a motion. Declaring it carried unanimously.

Mr. Straus, of Maryland, who had tried to get recognition, moved for a reconsideration. This secured for Mr. Straus a storm of disapproval, with cries of "Put him out," and the like. A motion to table his motion was made and carried with a great shout. Later, when the seconding speeches were in progress, Mr. Straus, who was to second Gray, attempted to explain that he wanted to have the Lincoln resolution reconsidered to include in it a great contemporary of Lincoln. He was howled down before he could give the name and was also not permitted to make his speech seconding the Gray nomination.

CROWD GUYS HEFLIN.

J. H. Sullivan of Iowa, and I. G. Gilmore of Louisiana, had a hard time making a few brief remarks, as did J. A. Reed of Kansas City, who was named by Missouri to second the nomination of Bryan as a real citizen of Missouri. The crowd, more particularly the galleries, started in to guy and shout down Mr. Reed, but the Missourian was as cool as a cucumber, and soon the bulk of the crowd was with him. While he did not say all that he wanted to say he made a pretty good speech.

New Jersey seconded Gray briefly. Ne-

DEMOCRACY AGAIN PROVES IT IS THE GREATEST PARTY OF CONVERSATION ON EARTH

"A Word Fest in Which the English Language Was Burned at the Stake," in Samuel G. Blythe's Parlance—As Soon as One Orator Falls Fainting Another Bobs up to Take His Place.

By SAMUEL G. BLYTHE.

DENVER, Col., July 10.—Once more the Democracy has proved that it is the greatest conversational party on earth. It loves the sound of the human voice. Led by the celebrated word Vesuvius of Lincoln and tailed by the cloudburst of language, Alfalfa Bill, of Oklahoma, so-called, because he grows three crops of whiskers every year on the same soil, everything between is vocal.

Thus far the Democratic national convention has been a wordfest, and so it will continue to the end. We have had oratory in all the known styles, from that of the late Mr. John J. Demosthenes to that of Jimmy Oliver of Paradise Park, N. Y. The English language has been burned at the stake, has been taught to do double flip-flaps through the air, has been macerated, lacerated and chased screaming in agony from pillar to post.

Everybody Took a Whirl at It.

So soon as one orator fell fainting in the stand another jumped to take his place. Any man who had two connected thoughts in his system was allowed to take them out and exhibit them to the audience. We have revelled in apostrophes to the Grand Old Democratic party and all the time the Grand Old Democratic party has been sitting in its shirt sleeves up at Fairview, just outside of Lincoln, sitting on the front porch and thinking thoughts that have never been thought before, thoughts which by the way, will soon be reduced to speech.

And as this is being written, they are preparing to nominate Bryan, nominate him with a flood of language that will rise to the second galleries and exude through the windows, nominate him with words, phrases, periods, paragraphs and peroration, complicated with sufficient votes to make Mr. George Gray of Delaware and Mr. John Johnson of Minnesota look like two Tammany men who have been rudely assailed by the high altitude, subaltitude being especially remorseless on Tammany men, most of whom live in diving bells off the coast of Manhattan, or who are at any rate only normal when below the level of the sea.

It seems an error that Bryan should be nominated only once by this convention. Time, money, worry and all sorts of political bother could be saved if the convention would arise to its opportunity and nominate him four times, say, providing for the next sixteen years and doing away with the tumult and the turmoil of nominating him in sections, four years apart.

If some patriot, having the best interests of the Democracy at heart, had the foresight to arise in his place and demand that this convention should nominate Mr. Bryan four times the country would realize the act as a graceful recognition, not a sad press. ful resource we have, it seems a shame not to grasp this opportunity and go marching down to history as a convention that was gifted with foresight, enough at least to sacrifice himself thereon for the good of the party. The silliest piece was the fixed basis, which although fixed as it is, would then have the stamp of approval on it and we would all be happy and content.

Bryan Should Be Kept Forever.

Instead of that this purblind convention will nominate Mr. Bryan but once, reserving the future nominations to future conventions and recklessly and imprudently wasting a chance to be foreshanded. We should conserve our resources, as we have been told from time to time, and as Mr. Bryan is the most resourceful resource we have, it seems a shame not to grasp this opportunity and go marching down to history as a convention that was gifted with foresight enough at least to sacrifice himself thereon for the good of the party. The silliest piece was the nomination of Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, who is literally piling up sacrificial rites. Meantime they will lassoo somebody by tomorrow and furthermore it is announced that Mr. Bryan himself will be here, will come on a special train and address the convention. Opinion is divided as to whether this is a scheme to keep the people in town or whether Mr. Bryan is hurrying hithe to second his own nomination.

Revised from 9 Columns to 16.

At no time during the sessions yesterday or last night did they throw out Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania. No Democrat arose and put the boots to that indurated patriot. Not a tattoo was played with a hickory club on his unhoused head. Every person in the hall used to the spectacle of the Bryan managers beating Guffey to a pulp, turned down thumbs and yelled for the sacrifice. We had had it every time before. We felt we were being deprived of our rights to-day.

They produced the platform, a new little thing of some ampteen thousand words, warranted to work backwards, sidewise, up and down or kater cornered. The committees had labored faithfully. They had condensed it from nine columns to nine and revised it from nine columns to sixteen. They put it in the hotel duck press and squeezed it, and they borrowed a bicycle pump and blew it up.

They cut it in two sections and played cribbage with it, and they pasted it on a tetrahedral kite frame and flew it over towards Pike's Peak. They mauled, manhandled, petted, cajoled, and smeared this immortal document and when it came out it unequivocally and in ringing phrases denoted one thing, to wit: That there is a big and portly gentleman in Lincoln, Neb., who is very anxious to be elected President and who has departed from his old business of running a small store carrying a selected line of principles and now is expanded to a department store, which carries everything in the line of tenants from electric Senators by the direct vote of the people to the hope, foreshadowed, that Miss Democracy will never wear a wrath dress.

With the platform out of the way and Mr. Bryan in the way there is nothing left but the vice presidential situation, always grave, but now become acute.

Saving Gray from the Sacrifice.

The Amalgamated Protective Association of Vice Presidential Candidates held one last meeting and decided to stand firm. The members chased delegates around the corridors of the hotels, lamoed them into corners and pleaded for support. The Hon. George Gray of Delaware emitted once every hour a fresh statement that he will not, cannot, shall not accept. "Who touches a hair of you gray head," shouted Dennish and Marvel in a grand, antiphonal chorus, "will be handed one of our specially prepared declinations in any language desired by you," they said. A hundred others had distributed especially prepared acceptances but nobody would accept them.

It was a wild and whirly-gigy time. John Barrett worked valorously to keep from being drafted. Herman Ridder had bird lime in every direction. Herman Metz and Bird Coler announced they would each take half of it. Charles A. Towne spoke a piece for his. Alfalfa Bill Murray said he had miles of veins and slants of language in him that had never been tapped. An orator from Los Angeles who has been making the welkin ring in the Brown Palace Hotel every night for a week about his candidacy sent out gentlemen to agents among the crowd with dodgers announcing he is the author of a book that can be obtained for fifty cents a copy.

Every one of the candidates built a pyre in the lobby of the hotel and announced his willingness to sacrifice himself

Lamenting this, there was another phase of the convention to-day that struck a chill into the hearts of those who believe in precedent and regularity. All day long and all night long, too, they felt something was lacking. There was a sort of an indefinable longing, a reaching out for a sensation that had become a part of our lives. The flags, the bands, the horse-let-it-go-horse-cheers of the delegates, the massing of the standards, the professional Southerners jumping up every time "Dixie" was played, the bang of the gavel, the cries of "Choke it off," Charles F. Murphy giving an imitation of a clam, the glowing periods of the nominators, the raucous screams for "Bryan, Bryan, Bryan," Alice Roosevelt Longworth's new hat, matching perfectly in shade the plainness of Nicholas Longworth's bald head, Colonel John J. Martin hopping wildly from crag to crag to get into the flashlight pictures, the Denver people sitting calmly and wondering what it was all about, Ollie James giving a correct representation of beef, Bill Sapp with the only high hat owned in Kansas, a hundred and fourteen vice-presidential candidates in their best bows, all these things were there, but the twang was lacking.

braska gave way to Congressman Heflin of Alabama, and this statesman had a hard row of stumps to hoe, as his fellow Alabamians would put it. The paying began with his first sentence and continued until he finished.

When Oklahoma was reached Senator Gore was sent to the stand to tell how much the new State wanted Bryan. It is wonderful the hold this blind man has on the great crowds which fill the Auditorium. The previous speakers had been gayed to the point of insult. Although they all wanted to say a good word for Bryan the crowd would have none of it, or at least not more than they could help.

BIG OVATION FOR GORE.

The minute Senator Gore was led to the platform the noise was calmed as by magic, and it was only on his own volition and despite cries to continue that he ceased speaking. From then on to the end it was a succession of announcements from speakers that they were solid for Bryan.

Then came the roll call, which was to determine who was to be the nominee of the party. There never was any doubt of it, but this was to make sure. Bryan got votes in every State but three, Delaware, Minnesota and New Jersey, in only two other States did he fail to get a majority of the delegates, Georgia and Maryland. He got all the votes in forty-two States and territories. It was the most overwhelming victory ever gained in a national convention where there was a semblance of a contest.

It was the vote of Pennsylvania which gave Mr. Bryan the necessary two-thirds vote. When that State was called he was forty-seven votes shy of a nomination. He got forty-nine and one-half votes in Pennsylvania.

When the result of the ballot was announced, the scene was one never to be forgotten, tier on tier and gallery on gallery of agitated forms, the women in white, the delegates massed below, many of them coatless, a myriad of fans fluttering to combat the stifling heat, and close atmosphere of the long pent up exuberant multitude, breaking into a feverish burst of enthusiasm, with everywhere the blaze of flags and bunting and patriotic devices and the enveloping folds of Old Glory.

THRONG IN MAD ECSTACY.

Twice before the throng had been moved into a mad ecstacy, first by the speech placing the name of Bryan in nomination, and again when that of Governor Johnson of Minnesota was presented, but these manifestations paled before the culminating outburst of emotion.

As the announcement of the Nebraskan's actual nomination was made, the whole assemblage rose en masse, waving flags, handkerchiefs, newspapers, hats and coats, anything and everything which hands could lay upon to wave aloft or hurl into the air, while a bedlam of sound poured out from these 10,000 throats in exultant yells, cat calls, Comanche war shouts, with the added din of shrieking horns, the roar of megaphones and the strains of the band playing an outlaw anthem.

When for a moment order could be secured out of the tumultuous chaos, State after State which had at first recorded its vote for Johnson or Gray fell into line with the overwhelming column, and the nomination was made by acclamation with but one dissenting voice from the State of Georgia.

NO SECOND TERM, SAYS BRYAN.

FAIRVIEW, Lincoln, Neb., July 10.—Informed of the nomination at 5:30 (7:30 Eastern time), William J. Bryan said:

"The Presidency is the highest official position in the world, and no one occupying it can afford to have his views upon public questions biased by a personal ambition. Recognizing his responsibility to God and his obligation to his countrymen, he should enter upon the discharge of his duties with singleness of purpose. Believing that one can best do this when he is not planning for a second term, I announce now, as I have on former occasions, that if elected I shall not be a candidate for re-election.

"This nomination is as pure a nomination from the people as was ever made. If elected my obligation will be to the people. I appreciate the honor the more because it came not from one person or a few persons, but from the rank and file of the Democratic party acting freely and without compulsion."

HISGEN'S VIEW OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY

SPRINGFIELD, July 10.—The Springfield Union today says:

Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield, who will bear the standard of the Independence League in the presidential campaign, left for Boston yesterday and went by boat to Portland in the afternoon to attend the Maine convention of the Independence Leaguers today, at which he will be one of the principal speakers. Maine expects to send a full delegation to the national convention in Chicago, July 27, to assist in nominating Mr. Hisgen for the Presidency.

Mr. Hisgen has been reading the newspaper reports of the doings of the Denver convention with mingled interest and amusement. "They will nominate Bryan this time," he said, "and four years from now will put a man up of the Judge Parker stripe if there is enough of the Democratic party left at that time to hold a conven-

NATIONAL PLATFORM OF DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Principles Enunciated by the Denver Convention.

Anti-Injunction Plank of Democratic Convention

DENVER, Col., July 10.—Following is the platform adopted by the Democratic National Convention:

Preamble.

We, the representatives of the Democracy of the United States, in national convention assembled, reaffirm our belief in and pledge our loyalty to the principles of the party. We rejoice at the increasing signs of an awakening through out the country. The various investigations have traced graft and political corruption to the representatives of predatory wealth and laid bare the unscrupulous methods by which they have debauched elections and preyed upon a defenseless public through the agency of officials whom they have raised to place and power. The conscience of the nation is thoroughly aroused and must be appealed to to free the government from the grip of those who have made it a business asset of the favor-seeking corporations; it must become again a people's government and be administered in all its departments according to the Jeffersonian maxim of "equal rights to all, special privileges to none." Shall the people rule? Is the overshadowing issue at this time; it manifests itself in all the questions now under discussion and demands immediate consideration.

Economy in Administration.

The appropriations by the Republican Congress in the session just ended amount to $1,008,000,000 and the appropriations exceed the total expenditures of the last fiscal year by $30,000,000, in flagrant disregard of the fact that a deficit of more than $60,000,000 is now assured. We denounce the heedless waste of the people's money which has resulted in this appalling increase as a shameful violation of all prudent considerations of governmental economy and in no less than a crime against the millions of working men and women, from whose earnings the great proportion of these sums must be extorted through excessive tariff exactions and other indirect methods. We demand that a stop be put to this frightful extravagance, and insist upon rigid application of the strictest economy in every department compatible with frugal though efficient administration.

Government by Officeholders.

Coincident with the enormous increase in expenditure is the addition to the number of officeholders. During the last four years 50,254 were added, costing $16,586,000, and in the last six years of Republican administration the total number of new offices created, aside from army and navy, has been 99,319, entailing an additional expenditure of nearly $70,000,000 as against only 10,279 new offices created under the Cleveland and McKinley administrations, involving an expenditure of only $3,000,000. We denounce this profligate and growing increase in the number of officeholders as not only unnecessary and extravagant, but also so as clearly indicating a deliberate purpose on the part of the administration to keep the Republican party in power at public expense by thus increasing the number of its retainers and dependents. Such procedure we declare to be no less dangerous and corrupt than the purchase of votes at the polls.

Trusts.

We favor vigorous enforcement of the criminal law against guilty trust magnates and officials and demand the enactment of such legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States.

Tariff Reform Demanded.

We welcome the belated promise of tariff reform now offered by the Republican party as a tardy recognition of the righteousness of the Democratic portion of this question, but the people cannot safely entrust the execution of this important work to a party which is so obligated to the highly protected interests that it sponsors refer until after the election.

We favor an immediate revision of the tariff by the reduction of import duties. Articles entering into competition with articles controlled by trusts should be placed upon the free list; material reductions should be made in the tariff upon the necessaries of life, especially on articles competing with such American manufactures as are sold abroad more cheaply than at home, and gradual reduction should be made in such other schedules as may be necessary to restore the tariff to a revenue basis.

We demand the immediate repeal of the tariff on pulp, print paper, lumber, timber and logs, and that these articles be placed on the free list.

House of Representatives.

The House of Representatives was designed by the fathers of the Constitution to be the popular branch of our government, and, as such, intended to be responsive to the public will. In order for our scheme of Federal government to be a success, it is necessary that this purpose should be jealously guarded and protected. The House of Representatives, as controlled in recent years by the Republican party, has ceased to be a deliberative legislative body responsive to the will of a majority of its members, but has become an assembly under the absolute domination of the Speaker, who has entire control of its deliberations and powers of legislation.

Campaign Publicity.

We demand federal legislation forever terminating the partnership which has existed between the corporations of the country and the Republican party under the expressed or implied agreement that in return for the contributions of great sums of money wherewith to purchase elections, they should be allowed to continue substantially unmolested in their efforts to enrich upon the rights of the people.

Any reasonable doubt as to the existence of this relation has been forever dispelled by the sworn testimony of witnesses examined in the insurance investigation in New York, and the open admission, unchallenged by the Republican national committee, of a single individual that he himself, at the personal request of the Republican candidate for the presidency, raised over a quarter of a million dollars to be used in a single State during the closing hours of the last campaign. In order that this practice shall be stopped for all time, we demand the passage of a statute making it a felony for any person, officer of a corporation who shall either contribute on behalf of, or consent to the contribution by a corporation, of any money or thing of value to be used in furthering the election of a President or Vice President of the United States or of any member of Congress thereof.

We denounce the action of the Republican party, having complete control of the Federal Government, for its failure to pass the bill, introduced in the last Congress, to compel the publication of the names of contributors and the amounts contributed toward Congress funds, and point to the evidence of their insincerity, when they sought by an absolutely irrevelant and inoperative amendment to defeat the passage of the bill. As a further evidence of their intention to continue their campaign in the coming contest with vast sums of money wrested from favor-seeking corporations, we call attention to the fact that the recent Republican national convention at Chicago refused, when the plank was presented to it, to declare against such practices.

We pledge the Democratic party to the enactment of a law preventing any corporation contributing to a campaign fund and any individual from contributing an amount above a reasonable minimum and providing for due publication before election of all such contributions.

Civil Service Reform.

We believe in civil service reform, and demand that the laws pertaining thereto shall be rigidly enforced, to the end that merit and ability shall be the standard of promotion rather than political services rendered by the Republican party.

Maintain Adequate Navy.

We hold that the constitutional provision that a navy shall be provided and maintained means an adequate navy, and we believe that the interest of this country would be best served by having a navy able to protect and to defend at once the two great coasts of this country. We believe that neither coast in future should be left without adequate protection in the form of a fleet, and that American citizens should be protected in their rights wherever they may be in jeopardy.

The Misuse of Patronage.

We condemn, as a violation of the spirit of our Constitution, the use of the present chief executive in using the patronage of his high office to secure the nomination of one of his cabinet officers.

Railroad Regulation.

We recommend the power of Congress to exercise complete control over interstate commerce and the right of each State to exercise complete control over commerce within its borders.

We demand such enlargement of the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission as will enable it to compel railroads to perform their duties as common carriers in case of great discrimination and extortion.

We favor the efficient supervision and rate regulation of railroads engaged in interstate commerce. To this end we recommend the valuation of railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission, such valuation to take into consideration the physical value of each piece of property, original cost of reproduction and all elements of value that will render the valuation made full and just.

We favor such legislation as will prohibit the railroads from engaging in business which brings them into competition with their shippers; also such legislation which will assure such reduction in transportation rates as congress may deem just, such being taken to avoid reductions that would compel a reduction of wages, prevent adequate service or be injustice to legitimate investments. We heartily approve the law prohibiting the pass and the rebate, and we favor any legislation to restrain control and prevent such abuses.

We favor such legislation as will increase the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission, giving it the initiative with reference to rates and transportation changes put into effect by the railroad companies, and permitting the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix even initiative to declare a rate illegal and as being more than should be charged for the service. That the present law relating thereto is inadequate by reason of the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission is without power to fix or investigate a rate until complaint has been made to it by the shipper.

We further declare that all agreements of traffic or other associations of railway agents affecting interstate rates, service or classification, shall be unlawful unless filed with and approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

We favor the enactment of a law giving to the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to inspect proposed railroad tariff rates or schedules before they shall take effect, and if they be found to be unreasonable, to initiate an adjustment thereof.

Banking and Currency.

We believe that in so far as the needs of commerce require an emergency currency, such currency should be issued, controlled by the Federal Government and loaned on adequate security to National and State banks. We pledge ourselves to legislation under which the National banks shall be required to establish a guarantee fund for the prompt payment of the depositors of any insolvent National bank under an equitable system which shall be available to all State banking institutions wishing to use it.

We favor a postal savings bank, if the guaranteed bank cannot be secured, and that it be constituted so as to keep the deposit money in the communities where it is established. But we condemn the policy of the Republican party in providing postal savings banks under a plan of contract by which those will accredit the deposits of rival communities and redeposit the same while refusing deposits of money in the banks of Wall street, those pledging the circulating notes to be distributed to regions and unjustly favoring the speculative markets.

Protection of American Citizens.

We pledge ourselves to insist upon the just and lawful protection of our citizens at home and abroad, and to use all proper methods to secure for them, whether native born or naturalized, and without discrimination of race or creed, the equal protection of laws and the enjoyment of all rights and privileges to them under the covenants of our treaties of friendship and examination and under existing treaties the right of travel and sojourn is denied to American citizens or recognition is withheld from American passports by any countries on the ground of race or creed we favor the beginning of negotiations with the governments of such countries to secure by new treaties the removal of the unjust discrimination.

We demand that all over the world a duly authenticated passport issued by the government of the United States to American citizens shall be proof of the fact that he is an American citizen, and shall entitle that to such recognition.

Income Tax Favored.

We favor an income tax as part of our revenue system, and we urge the submission of a constitutional amendment specifically authorizing Congress to levy and collect a tax upon individual incomes when it comes to the end that wealth may bear its proportionate share of the burdens of the Federal Government.

Popular Election of Senators.

We favor the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people, and regard this reform as the gateway to other national reforms.

Statehood for Territories.

The national Democratic party has for the last sixteen years labored for the admission of Arizona, and New Mexico as separate States of the Federal Union, and, recognizing that each possesses every qualification to successfully maintain separate State governments, we favor the immediate admission of these Territories as separate States.

Asiatic Immigration.

We favor full protection by both national and State governments within their respective jurisdictions against the further coming in the United States under twenty years of age, but we are opposed to the admission of Asiatic immigrants who cannot be amalgamated with our population, whose presence among us shall not be a race issue and involve us in diplomatic controversy with friendly powers.

The Panama Canal.

We believe that the Panama Canal will prove of great value to our country and we favor its speedy completion.

The Philippines.

We condemn the experiment in imperialism as an inexcusable blunder, which has involved us in an enormous expense, brought us weakness instead of strength, and led our nation upon the dangerous path of abandoning a fundamental doctrine of self-government. We favor an immediate declaration of the nation's purpose to recognize the independence of the Philippine Islands as soon as stable government can be established, such independence to be guaranteed by us as we guarantee the independence of Cuba, until the neutralization of the islands can be secured by treaty with other powers. In recognizing the independence of the Philippines our government should retain such land as may be necessary for coaling stations and naval bases.

Pensions.

We favor such generous pension policy, both as a matter of justice to the deserving veterans and their dependents and because it relieves the country of the necessity of maintaining a large standing army.

Home Rule for States.

Believing, with Jefferson, in "Support of the State governments in all their rights as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns and the surest bulwark against anti-Republican tendencies," and in "the preservation of the federal government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad," we are opposed to the centralization implied in the recent policy now frequently made that the powers of the federal government should be extended by executive and legislative action and by judicial construction.

There is no twilight zone between the nation and the State in which exploiting interests can take refuge from both, and it is necessary that the federal government shall exercise the powers delegated to it so that the State government shall use the authority reserved to them, but we insist that federal remedies for the regulation of interstate commerce and for the prevention of private monopoly shall be added to, not substituted for State remedies.

Post Roads.

We favor the co-operation of federal, State and local authorities in the construction and maintenance of post roads.

Conclusion.

The Democratic party stands for democracy; the Republican party has drawn to itself all that is aristocratic and plutocratic. The Democratic party is the champion of equal rights and opportunities to all; the Republican party is the party of privilege and private monopoly. The Democratic party listens to the voice of the whole people and counts prosperity by the prosperity and advancement of the average man; the Republican party is subservient to the comparatively few who are the beneficiaries of governmental favoritism.

We invite the co-operation of all, regardless of previous political affiliation or past differences who desire to preserve a government of the people, by the people and for the people and will favor such an administration of the government as will insure, as far as human wisdom can, that each citizen shall draw from society a reward commensurate with his contribution to the welfare of society.

HE who says that good barley beer is an injurious drink is stating an untruth.

There is no more healthful drink in the world than a glass of

Budweiser

Combining the nourishing qualities of select Barley-Malt and the tonic properties of the highest grade of Bohemian Hops, it is food, drink and a tonic, invigorating every tissue of bone and brain.

NO living man ever had a more extraordinary, eventful and romantic career than this bold and brilliant student of Bonn, who began life as a German Revolutionist and ended it as an American leader.

His famous and dashing exploit, the rescue of Kinkel (hero of Rastadt), has been immortalized by Spielhagen, in a thrilling drama of marvelous beauty and exquisite charm.*

No more ardent advocate of "Personal Liberty" ever breathed than this eloquent and valiant lieutenant of Abraham Lincoln, who fought to the very last (with tongue, sword and pen) and died, at three score years and seventeen, bearing with conscious dignity, the threefold honors of Prussian patriot, Independent statesman, and Union general.

From youth to old age the delicious and wholesome juices of the malt put iron into his blood, giving life and force and power to all his thoughts and doings.

BABY SCRATCHED DAY AND NIGHT

Tormenting Eczema Spread from Child's Arm to Ear and Face—All Kinds of Salves and Remedies Met with No Success—Finally

TORTURES YIELDED TO CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I had a lot of trouble with my little girl's eczema. She had been a sufferer for some time. The eczema began on her arm and then it got on her face and ear. We had our family doctor, who treated her and did all he could,

He gave her all kinds of salves and remedies, but the disease tormented her so she would scratch day and night. Then I read of what Cuticura had done for children. We used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, bandaging her so that the eczema would not spread over her whole body. After using the Cuticura Remedies for a month she started to improve. I have used Cuticura Soap for her since she was born, and that with one box of Ointment cured her. I am glad she is cured, and I always recommend the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Lillie Bittner, 529 Ontario St., South Bethlehem, Pa., March 18 and April 15, 1908."

FEARFUL PSORIASIS

Lasted Four Years. Irritation was Terrible. Cured by Cuticura.

"My disease was psoriasis. It was a particularly bad case, affecting me from my head to my feet, and the irritation was terrible. I suffered for four years off and on. I had seen five doctors and tried sundry remedies, but none gave me any ease until I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. My case being a very bad one, it naturally took longer to make a good impression, but after persevering day after day for a month, I seemed to make fair progress. I began to use the Cuticura Remedies about July, 1905, and my cure was complete about October of the same year. Alfred Terry, 1 Fairfield Rd., Wood Green, N., England, March 23, 1908."

MEEHAN IS FINED $50 FOR BOOKMAKING

Appeals Sentence in Case Brought Through Efforts of Watch and Ward.

Frank Meehan, who was arrested at the Hotel Cecil on June 27, charged with registering a bet on horse races at Sheepshead Bay, was to-day given a hearing before Judge Parmenter in the First Session of the Municipal Court. He was found guilty and fined $50. He appealed and was held for the grand jury in $500 bonds.

The evidence against Meehan was secured by Frank L. Hood and Jefferson B. Parker, assistant secretary for the Watch and Ward Society, which is prosecuting the case. Hood and Parker appeared as witnesses against Meehan. Parker testified that he placed a bet of $1 on a horse, Priscillian by name. The horse won, and the next day, he said, Meehan paid him $1.60. He testified he had previously made other bets with Meehan, and that he won three of them and received the money from Meehan.

Attorney Henry V. Cunningham, for Meehan, argued that there was no evidence to show that horse racing had been conducted at Sheepshead Bay on the days named. Attorney L. B. Johnson appeared for the Watch and Ward Society.

WOMAN PLUNGES FOUR STORIES; HUSBAND HELD

MRS. MINNIE F. COLE DIES AT HOSPITAL; POLICE MAKE RIGID PROBE.

Mrs. Minnie F. Cole, thirty-one years of age, of No. 61 Dartmouth street, South End, died at the City Hospital at 10:15 to-day as the result of a fall of seventy-five feet from the fourth floor of the house.

Detained at Station 5, South End, is Edward Cole, her husband, and a woman named Carrie Glen, who formerly lived at No. 15 Dartmouth street, but now resides in Columbus avenue.

The matter is being investigated by Special Officer Bernard McNally of the East Dedham street station. Cole, the detained husband, says that early to-day his wife threw herself from the window before he could prevent her.

Heard Sound of Scuffle.

Mrs. Walsh, the proprietor of the lodging house, says she heard sounds of a scuffle in the house, and George Carron, who lodges directly beneath the rooms occupied by the Coles, says that he heard the sound of a heavy fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole had been married about five weeks, and to-day she was to have gone to New Hampshire for an extended visit, for she had quite a sum of money in her own right and property and relatives in that State.

According to stories told the police by Mrs. Walsh and Carron and other lodgers in the house, Mr. and Mrs. Cole and Carrie Glen came to the house about 10 o'clock last night. Soon afterward the two women left the house for supper.

They returned about midnight. They went up to the Cole room where Cole was lying dressed on the bed. The wife complained of being ill, and Cole, the police say, took her to another room.

Mrs. Walsh says that she heard scuffling in the room and that afterward when she looked in the room she found the gas jet had been twisted almost out of sight.

Fell Heavily on Floor.

Mrs Walsh says she heard talking between Cole, his wife and Carrie Glen in the room at 2 o'clock in the morning. Carron says that at 4 o'clock he heard the sound as of some body falling heavily in the Coles' room just above him. Then all was quiet.

Some time afterward Mrs. Walsh was notified by Cole that his wife had jumped from the window to the pavement. He says that before he could realize what was happening his wife rushed to the window and climbed out on the coping. Just as he sprang to her, he says, she jumped.

Mrs. Cole, her husband says, was some years ago a popular dancer and singer in one of Daniel Frohman's companies.

MALONE TO CONTINUE SUIT AGAINST MERGER

REPORTED SALE OF B. & M. WILL NOT STOP COURTS, SAYS ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

Attorney-General Dana Malone to-day announced that he would continue his prosecution against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, despite the reported sale of 110,000 shares of Boston & Maine stock to John L. Billard of Meriden, Ct.

"I have no means of information as to what has been done," said Attorney-General Malone this afternoon to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "and I shall proceed in the suit I have instituted in the same manner until I am satisfied that there has been a real change in the ownership of the stock. The writs be returnable on August 3. The New Haven road will then be given thirty days in which to file an answer.

"The Commonwealth will then have a month in which to reply. That will bring the matter to the first of October. In the meantime—well, we are at work. The Commonwealth's case with the New Haven isn't finished by any means.

"Sale a Trick," Says Lawrence.

W. B. Lawrence, one of the principal stockholders of the Boston & Maine and who has opposed the merger from the start, said to-day:

"It is no fib; such a transparent trick as this 'sale' of the 110,000 shares of Boston & Maine stock by the New Haven will not save the latter. I have expected some such move by July 1 in the New Haven's endeavor to save itself, but it will fail. The money required would be $16,000,000 in the first place. In the second place, this stock has cost the New Haven all the way from 130 to 190. Do you suppose they are selling it for 125 when its average cost to them is at least 155? It is for the New Haven to prove this sale is bona fide."

"I'm Pleased," Says Brandeis.

Louis D. Brandeis said to-day: "I am very much pleased. This is exactly what we tried to have the road required to do, and if it is sincere in its action the result is just what we want."

President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine said: "President Mellen has informed me that the stock has been sold to Mr. Billard and that it was an actual sale. I am disposed to believe that there has been no actual sale sufficient to satisfy all legal requirements. If it not to be presumed Mr. Billard paid $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 of his own cash for the stock. He may have banking connections which would be glad to finance such a purchase, and if he has not, the bankers interested in the New Haven could easily arrange the matter."

MERIDEN AMAZED AT SALE OF ROAD TO COAL DEALER

MERIDEN, Ct., July 10.—All Meriden read with a gasp of astonishment to-day that John L. Billard, who runs a prosperous coal and wood yard on Hanover street and for the past four or five years has been president of the Meriden Savings Bank, had purchased the Boston & Maine Railroad.

"John" Billard, as he is familiarly called here, has lived in Meriden all his life. He has been looked upon for years as one of the city's leading citizens, a power in local politics and a pillar of his church. Business men who know say that the coal and wood yard, with prosperous real estate investments, have brought the Billard bank account up to $100,000 or possibly $200,000.

Four or five years ago he was elected president of the Meriden Savings Bank, a prosperous institution, that stands well up in the State banking commissioner's report.

Merchants and business men in the "centre" were astounded, to-day, when they read the dispatches that told of the sale of the B. & M. road to Billard for $14,000,000 odd.

NEW OCEAN RECORD FOR LUSITANIA

NEW YORK, July 10.—The Cunard liner Lusitania reached port to-day with all her own and therefore all existing records broken for the westward passage from Queenstown. She made the trip in four days, nineteen hours and thirty-six minutes. This was a cut of thirty-two minutes off the Lusitania's best previous time for the westward trip. Her best average speed this trip was 25.01 knots an hour and her best day's run was 645 knots, on Monday. Her day's runs were: 625 knots on Tuesday, 622 Wednesday, 611 Thursday and 360 on the last lap home on Friday.

BURDETT GOT $2,000 FROM "L" AS COUNSEL

For looking after the interests of the Boston Elevated Railroad on Beacon Hill during the past year, Everett W. Burdett, who is usually more particularly taken up with matters pertaining to the Lighting Trust, received $2,000, according to lobby returns filed with the Secretary of State to-day. The firm of Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall, which is employed by the Elevated, received nothing from the road in addition to the regular retainer. This legal firm also received a retainer from the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

HUB POSTOFFICE GAINS.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The postal receipts of Boston for June, 1908, were $415,469.88, as compared with $409,108.31, an increase of $6,361.57, or 1.55 per cent. The receipts of fifty of the largest cities show a general increase of $61,682.90, or .88 per cent.

TROOPS TO CRUSH SNAKES.

GUTHRIE, July 10.—Acting Governor Bell has just ordered a company of National Guards to Chandler to proceed at once to the scene of the Indian trouble. The troops are ordered out at request of two sheriffs and Adjutant General Canton, who are on the scene. Other companies were ordered under arms.

AFTER MRS. GUNNESS.

LAPORTE, Ind., July 10.—The County Commissioners of Laporte County instructed Sheriff Smither to go to Hyndale, Mich., to investigate the arrest of a woman suspected of officers there of being Mrs. Gunness, the notorious Death Farm poisoner.

Beautiful Hair

should be every woman's pride and joy. But how many women possess it? To be really beautiful the hair must be soft, silky, glossy and abundant. This long sought for and highly desirable condition of the hair can be brought about easily and quickly by a little careful attention and the use of

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP HAIR TONIC

This tonic is most of all a hair beautifier. It restores the original lustre and sheen to the hair, stimulates its growth and renews the original softness and splendor. It transforms thin, faded, lifeless, scanty hair to a rich, heavy, healthy, luxuriant growth.

For over a third of a century Woodbury's Combination Hair Tonic has been used at the Woodbury Institute. This is the identical tonic used there today. A trial will convince you that it is the ideal preparation not only for preserving the hair and keeping it healthy, but also for beautifying it.

Another Big Buy

From Adolph Arons & Co.—104, 106 Bleecker St., N. Y., Makers of ATHLA SYSTEM—Men's High Class Clothes Which Is a Standard of Excellence

Still at it. Things have been humming here for the past month and we simply couldn't afford to let the interest drop. Big wholesalers, knowing our tremendous selling capacity, have been hot on our trail. Stock after stock has been turned down—we wanted something big, and we waited until the right thing came along—and we must confess that this is the "best ever" in clothes selling.

We took all the suits this firm had left at the close of their wholesale season—took them at a saving of 40 to 60 cents on the dollar. The money sacrifice to Adolph Arons & Co. was a small matter—the main thing with them was quick disposal, in one lot and for cash. Few retailers could handle such a big lot of goods—few have big enough outlet—fewer still have the ready cash. We have both—and our reputation for value giving is sure to be strengthened by the character of these goods. The suits are all kinds, in the newest fabrics, the smartest colors and patterns of a very smart season. Sizes for young men or older men—Stouts, slims, regulars.

$8.50 Blue Serges $5

ATHLA SYSTEM

All you have to do is to look at the suits—if you don't say they go ahead of anything you ever saw at $8.50, we'll be greatly mistaken. There's no profit in them for us—excepting your good will—and we are sure of this with every suit we sell. There are fancy worsteds, light in weight and color, and blue serges that we back up with our guarantee of satisfaction, or, "your money back if you want it."

Serges or Worsteds Made to Sell at $10 6.75

The coats are single breasted, with the very latest of the present style ideas worked into them. Serges are fast color and of a character that hold their shape. Cassimeres and worsteds in swell-looking plaids, checks and fancy patterns.

Fancy Worsted Suits Made to Sell at $12 8.75

Adolph Arons & Co. have a reputation for superiority of cut, fit, excellence of fabrics and the quality of linings and tailoring—and in these suits you see a perfect combination of these qualities. Mixtures, invisible checks, stripes and plaids.

Why Women Grow Old Sooner Than Men

By DOROTHY DIX

THE National Union of Women Workers in London has been trying to solve a problem—why women grow old sooner than men.

It is a pathetic sort of question, because it brings us face to face with the most curious tragedy of a woman's life, and that is growing old.

Age, until it reaches the period of decrepitude, does not matter to a man. It does not affect the esteem in which he is held by the fellow men, and if he has unlowed and broadened with years, and learned a philosophy of regarding fate from them, his gray hairs are a crown of honor and not a reproach to him.

The situation is entirely different to a woman. The conquest of admiration is that she must remain perpetually young to be attractive. At an age when a man is considered most eligible, she must abandon all hope of marriage, or failing in that regard, ever, because she is branded as an old maid.

If she married when she was young, she is in perpetual danger of losing her husband's affection for no other reason than because she has become toddle-aged.

If she follows any profession, only the most transcendent ability can hold her in her place after her first youth is gone and her face wrinkled.

No matter how brilliant and intellectual she is, or how charming, no man will voluntarily take her out to a place of amusement after she has passed her golden prime of life, nor will he talk to her except upon compulsion, and when he does, she knows that he is figuring it out that he owes a long angel is looking down, and scoring it up to him on the credit side of the ledger, that he himself can't do really well, but to entertain an elderly lady.

Terrible to Grow Old

It is because it is so terrible a thing for a woman to grow old—because it wipes down her pleasures and her perquisites so much—that women cling with both hands to youth, and make such heroic efforts to stay away the evil days.

They do it in vain, however. The relentless march of time never stops, and in spite of all they can do they grow old quicker than men.

There are many reasons for this. The principal one, of course, is woman's physical peculiarities. Every the headiest woman who goes through the normal experiences of her sex suffers more actual pain and sickness than any man does who is not a chronic invalid. The agony of body and quivering nerves that blanches a woman's hair and dims the fine lines of age around her eyes and mouth ten years before their time.

In addition to this, a woman's lot in the world, whether she be the domestic woman who has too few servants or the society woman who has too many, tends to age her just as much as work. Life is too slow or too fast.

The ordinary wife of the ordinary business man ages faster than he does, because she suffers the deadening monotony of a narrow round of duties that she does over and over again day after day, and year after year, with no variety in the monotony.

She cooks, and washes, and sews, and mends, and mends, and darns, and nurses babies, and minds their little fevers, and answers the innumerable calls made for her attention, she is worn out bodily, mentally and spiritually.

The Things That Age

The elasticity goes out of her, her interest in life, her pride and ambition wither away; and because she has always to do petty duties, and her intelligence has to continually reach down to the level of children's minds and occupations, she grows dull, and lifeless and old.

Her husband's woes may be just as hard, just as much a grind of doing the same things every day, but he may have just as few opportunities for culture and amusement as she has; but his work is done all ways in the open. He has companions; he sees fresh faces, and hears new things every day, and the attention with the out side world keeps him stimulated, and fresh, and vital, and young.

On the other hand, the woman who goes out into the world to earn grows old because when she takes up the burden of the bread winner she adds another burden as a woman. She must bear children.

It is a literal fact that the working woman bears two lives at once. She is man and woman, bread winner and bread giver.

When the working man goes home from his day's labor he almost always goes to a home that has been made comfortable by some woman. When the working woman goes home she nearly invariably has to create a home comfortable for somebody else.

Men Don't Worry

Women grow old sooner than men because they are better hands at borrowing misfortune than men are. Men duck worry, and women seek it. Men try to forget their sorrows; women nurse and gloat over them.

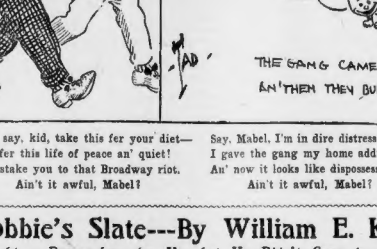
Perhaps men will always have an advantage in this respect, but women are learning much on the subject, and it is the credit of their emancipation that they have moved the old age mark up twenty years for us.

A woman is still a girl at an age when she was formerly an old maid. She is in her prime at a period of life when women used to be laid on the shelf; and she is playing golf and paddling around the world now at a time of life when, in the old days, the decent thing a woman could do was to sit in a corner and knit baby socks for her grandchildren.

We take better care of our health than they did. They keep their minds young by study, and clubs, and society, and philanthropies, for they have discovered that the real spring of eternal youth is in each person's own heart, and that by mingling up with perennial interests and sympathies no one can ever grow old.

Bobbie's Slate---By William E. Kirk

Pa Bought a Bung-a-low for Ma, but Ma Didn't Seem to Care for It



This picter is the bung-a-low. I'm glad we doant hav to live in it.

THE picter I am drawing on my slate today is a picter of a little house. Pa bought the house a few hundred (2008) dollers. The naim of the house is a bung-a-low, it has one (1) room, but it is a big room, it is all the house.

Sunday morning was Ma's birthday & Pa sed Deerest Luv, I have a surprize for you. Pa was out quite fait the afte hoor to a dinner which was given by sum men called the Fryers. It was a hot dinner.

Pa looked kind of funny when he set down to the brekfast table & Ma looked kind of frunny at him, too. Deerest Luv, Pa sed agenin, I have a surprize for you.

Well Pa is out the hitter boring kind of ways calls Ma Deerest Luv. Heart of my heart, sed Ma to Pa, sure does la vary red. Have you been weeping?

No, sed Pa, but I must tell you about the surprize when I have for you. I am not going to tell you just yet, but I will tell you as soon we git our in Our Hand. So we will all git on a car, sed Pa, & go to Our Hand & wen we are there I will show you sumpling that will mait you vary happy indeed for the rest of our life.

Then we all got on a street car and went to Our Hand. Wen we got off the car Pa took Ma & me thru sum woods about (2) miles. It was offul hot & I had prickly heet & Ma sed For Heavens sake, where are you taking us to? This lonly wood is a fine place for a murder, sed Ma!

Poor not, sed Pa, fear not. I am going to show you sumpling, & jest then we came to a funny littel house. Deerest Luv, sed Pa, this is all purrs. Then Pa waved & we shall watch the sun rising in the East, & Gus. Pa sed, we shall git peecefully through this fu-ture span of life. It is sutch a littel span, Pa sed, wen compered with Eturnity.

How much did you pay for this shack? sed Ma. Two anndred dollars, sed Pa, & do you expect me to live in this haverel? sed Ma. This lowe a luxrel, it is a bung-a-low, Pa sed. Let us step within & contemplate the inside decksorashuns.

You ruddient get me inside of that scanty with a hook, Ma sed. What in the world possessed you to buy a litel flow cod we put all our furniture into the hold of a place? Ma sed, & where would we do our markeeing? & where is there a skoolhouse & a churchh.

Husbands I Have Met

Sidelights on Marriage by a Sympathetic Spinster

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No. 6—Ought to Be a Bachelor

"I WONDER why it is," mused the spinster-lady, "that we see so little of Mabel? She used to be so gay, and loved going out. Tom is on hand for everything, the gayest of the gay; but Mabel is a regular mouse. I think I'll see if I can't rouse her up a bit."

But Mabel was not easy to rouse. She said listlessly that she did not care for going out. She had gotten into the way of staying at home and preferred it.

However, the spinster-lady was not easily discouraged, and she kept at her self-appointed task.

"I wish you'd tell me why you won't go, Mabel," she said one day. "This is going to be a particularly nice dance. You would be sure to enjoy it."

"Tom seems to love going. He leads all the cotillions and is a great beau among the girls."

No Time for Wife

"That's just it," said the wife bitterly. "He is such a beau to other people that he has no time left to pay any attention to his wife. I spend days planning a new dress, and put it on, hoping to win a compliment from him; but it might just as well be dressed in factory cotton for all the notice he takes of it.

"But that same evening, if Mrs. Jones comes in dressed in new gown he is all gallantry and praise of her gown and appearance.

"Is that the reason you have given up going out?"

"Partly that, and partly because Tom does not want me to go. If I am with him he is not so free to pay attention to other women. Without me he can be as gay and unfettered as he likes."

I think I'd go, if only to spite him," said the spinster-lady.

"Oh, no, you wouldn't, if you had to sit around all evening and watch your husband dance attendance on other women while he neglected you."

"But, Mabel, Tom is fond of you. I'm sure he is."

"Oh, yes; fond enough in a way. I'm useful to him. I keep his house, mend his clothes and make him comfortable. I'm a habit, that's all.

"If he is ill, he's very glad to be around and be petted and made much of."

"Too Good to Him"

"You're too good to him. I don't see why you are so nice to him. I wouldn't be."

Yes, you would, dear. Women are like that, you know. A man can be as selfish as he likes, and yet always find some wife or mother who makes a slave of herself for his sake."

"I think it's most unfair. People feel sorry for Tom. They say it's such a pity that you won't exert yourself to go out when he likes it so much, and that you deserve to lose his love."

Yes, I know all that; but I cannot make myself go when Tom shows so plain by it that I bores him to me there.

Well, said the spinster-lady, rebelliously, "I'm very sure of one thing, and that is that the next time I hear a lot of women pitying Master Tom I'm just going to tell them how things stand and let them see that you are the member of this family that deserves their pity."

Helpers for Housewives

HAVE a pan containing two gallons of cold water. In this dissolve a piece of washing soda about the size of an egg and heat to a boiling point. Let the silver soak in this for three or four minutes, keeping it boiling. Lift out with wire spoon or fork, wash in hot soapsuds and wipe quickly with dry towel. "This will not injure solid or plated silver.

In making Summer frocks for children remember that the dat-shouldered effect is correct and becoming. The trade to that the armhole is not noticeable. Long sleeves of sheer net, washable tulle, silk mull, lace, etc., are very smart in certain dresses and very becoming if cut so that they define the arm closely. The full pointed skirts are very popular, the plaits being very close together and fitted and stitched very smoothly about the hips. Although the gored circular skirts are much used and are easier to launder.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

BY THE PROFESSOR

FLESHY NOSE TROUBLES

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I will be highly gratified if you will kindly prescribe something that can be done for a long nose. Mine is the tip. Have been made the butt of the ridicule of some and would greatly appreciate your courtesy in this matter. S. S.

THE shape of the nose has been successfully modified by constant pinching in a gentle manner. The following ointment is for the reduction of flesh and might help you: Take bottle of potassium, forty-six grains; vaseline and lanoline, each one and three-fourths ounces; theriam of benzoin, twenty drops. Make into a pomade and rub over the fatty parts twice a day. In the meantime do not eat cocoa, potatoes, fat, beans and others of their class, as well as sweets of all kinds.

REGARDING THE VOICE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am desirous of improving my voice somewhat, and would appreciate any suggestion you would make. I have been able to sing, but of late my throat is clogged up. I would also like to ask if smoking is injurious to the voice? Has the focus anything to do with the voice? Also advise if eggs taken raw are good. EDWARD.

SMOKING is decidedly injurious to the voice, and if you ever expect to sing you will be obliged to quit it. Some foods are injurious, nuts especially. They thicken the mucous membrane and render it rough. Raw eggs are said to clarify the voice and are excellent food. Correct breathing helps more than anything else, and to keep from irritating the throat in singing the voice must be properly placed, so that the tone forces comes from the right place and is directed in the right course.

STRAIGHTEN CURLY HAIR

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please advise me what is beneficial for my curly hair? Some of my hair is curly and some is not. Please be so kind as to notify me what to good for getting curly hair out of its original curl, as I do despise it very much.

A CONSTANT READER.

CONSTANT brushing and the use of a tonic which contains a small amount of oil will do more than anything else to straighten out the curly hair. Don't wash it too often, as that takes out the oil and leaves it dry and frizzy. Use tepid water when shampooing a dry shampoon of corn meal and orris root, a tablespoonful of the latter to a cupful of the former. This will cleanse the scalp and hair without taking out the oil from the hair without drying it so much as the soap and water would do.

HAS SUNKEN CHEEKS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly inform me what your opinion is regarding beauty doctors—whether you consider their work reliable, etc.? I am a young man twenty years old and have had sunken cheeks for some time and wish to try one of these doctors. IN DOUBT.

YOUR question is a general one to which no specific answer is possible. Just as in other professions, there are specialists who are thoroughly reliable, and again there are frauds. Be sure that you go to the right kind and you will receive decided benefit in the hollowness of your cheeks. The cucumber lotion is one of the best for sunken cheeks.

CUCUMBER LOTION

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me how to make some kind of a lotion for freckles, cucumber juice, but contains cucumber juice. I also can easily every time I take any kind of an outing. The cucumber lotions I have used seem to suit my skin better than anything else. E. L. B.

HEAT four ounces of olive oil and slice into it two small cucumbers without removing the peel. Let this stand for twenty-four hours and strain. Heat again and add one ounce of sweet almond oil and one dram each of white wax and spermaceti, stirring until nearly cold. If this does not make the cream as thick as you desire, remelt and add half a dram more of the white wax and spermaceti. Always be sure that your face is thoroughly dried and protected with powder before you go out and you will not freckle so easily.

Clews to Its Whereabouts and Clews to Other Hidden Gold and Treasure Revealed in This Story.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

WALTER SINCLAIR, a young business man from Cleveland, meets a woman of equal beauty in Boston. She gives her name as Madame Alvarez. She is mysterious and is pursued by enemies. She induces Sinclair to promise to aid her. He gets a chauffeur named Dalton and a red automobile to help him.

The woman is pursued by two men and a woman, who claim to be Dr. Malthus, proprietor of a sanitarium, and his assistants, Dr. Hornet and Rose Fernal. Dr. Malthus says that Madame Alvarez is insane, that she escaped from his hospital and stole jewels valued at $100,000 from a black bag belonging to Madame Alvarez had secreted in Boston, a valuable package which she implored Sinclair to guard secretly. He lost this package and went to the home of Dr. Malthus to find after the doctor had told him that he could tell him something about the missing package.

Dr. Malthus impressed on Sinclair the story that the woman, Madame Alvarez, is mad and that it was better that the fleeing woman be allowed to be discovered, and that her whereabouts be made known before she and himself were arrested.

Sinclair's fiancee, frightened at receiving word from him, came to Boston from Cleveland. He was unable to tell her the whole truth about his strange adventure with the mysterious woman and a break between them was threatening. Just then Dalton, who had previously been with Madame Alvarez reappeared with a message from her.

Sinclair opened a letter that had been given to him by Madame Alvarez, in which she warned him to beware of Dr. Malthus and his assistants. He was surprised when he opened his door in response to a knock to have Dalton, his chauffeur, appear in, with a bleeding wound in his head. Dalton explained that he had been attacked in the park and admonished Sinclair to be on the lookout.

Later at his hotel a man who looked somewhat like a tramp called on Sinclair. The Cleveland man saw that he was the same man who had called at a window at Mme. Alvarez, but who had dropped in humble disguise when he learned that a letter from the visitor had been handed Sinclair. He said Madame Alvarez was a patient in a home to which she had been taken blindfolded. The man referred to the woman as the "gracious lady."

In the letter Madame Alvarez asked Sinclair to open the packet she had intrusted to him and find the articles described. He was to place them in a safe deposit box. He opened the packet and found that it contained nothing but blank paper.

CHAPTER XX.

SMALL wonder that Malthus had been so willing to return the packet. The cipher instructions which it contained had now been in his possession three whole days and in that time he could easily have translated them and secured the valuable articles whose hiding places they described.

Remorseful as he felt at being foiled in this way Sinclair could not see in what way the misfortune was due to lack of caution on his part. The more he considered the matter the more he inclined to the belief that he had never really dropped the packet at all, but that it had been taken from his pocket as he stood in the station by Malthus or one of his unscrupulous. When it was returned to him the needs suspected that he was merely trying to see for himself that the papers were still inside of it. Instead of Madame Alvarez's explicit instructions as to what was to be done until told to by her.

He determined to see Malthus at once. Undoubtedly he would not be able to induce him to return the precious papers, but at least he would have the satisfaction of calling him to his face a liar and a thief.

He reached for the telephone directory to look up the address of the Belgrave Sanitarium. The name of no such institution appeared in its pages. Neither was it in the city directory.

Anxious to settle at once the truth or falsity of this sanitarium story which had been so skilfully concocted and apparently for his especial benefit that he telephoned to the City Hospital and to several well-known physicians in different parts of the city. From all came the positive answer that they had never heard of Dr. Malthus nor of an institution called the Belgrave Sanitarium. Quite evidently the institution was a myth and thus one more clew on whose old he had been relying ended only in greater perplexity.

Save for his dim recollection of the long, tortuous route by which the mysterious cabman had driven him and of the appearance of the lonely house with its door protected by bolts and bars, he had no idea of where to look for the fictitious doctor. To find the cabman might be possible, but if, as he had good reason to believe, he was in league with Malthus and his fellow conspirators, this would accomplish little. With the success of her enterprise and perhaps her life itself at stake, Sinclair suddenly found himself robbed of the power even to attempt to carry out Madame Alvarez' orders.

Unable to devise any way out of this difficulty he walked down to the waiting car and ordered the chauffeur to drive him to the hospital where Dalton had been taken. If the injured man had recovered consciousness there was just one chance in a thousand that his story of the assault which had come so near ending fatally for him would furnish some clew of value.

At the hospital he found Dalton's condition still serious. He had recovered consciousness, but lapsed at frequent intervals into wild fits of delirium. It would do no harm for Sinclair to see him, although the attendants were doubtful if he would recognize him or be able to talk coherently.

Dalton raised a wan face from the pillow and smiled faintly his recognition of his visitor. The pain had wrought a curious change in him; his bronzed features had lost color and looked drawn and thin.

The greetings over, he launched at once into a recital of the manner in which the assault had taken place, but the effort was too much for his overtaxed brain, and his utterance soon became too incoherent for Sinclair to make head or tail of the rambling story.

"Did you hear them say anything about some papers?" he asked; "some instructions in cipher they had taken from a leather pocket?"

"Some papers? Some papers?" said Dalton feebly. "Yes, there was some talk of them. They were talking of them just as I approached and it was, I think, because they thought I was trying to overhear what they said that they struck me."

"And what did they say about them?" asked Sinclair eagerly, fearful lest the man's strength give out before he had told all he knew. "Did they not say where they were?"

"Yes, the woman in black said that she had hidden them. She kept repeating that they were perfectly safe, and that no one could ever find them, but the two men appeared not to believe her. They insisted that they ought to be moved and at last they said they would bury them. Yes, bury them, those were their very words, sir."

"Yes," interrupted Sinclair almost brutally, "and where did they say they would bury them?"

Dalton was well nigh exhausted by his effort. He was gasping for breath and each word came with increasing difficulty. Sinclair bent over him in his anxiety not to miss a single syllable.

"They said," panted Dalton, "they said—they would have—would have stolen—bury them—at the foot of—the tall elm—in—"

The man's strength was gone. His voice sank to a faint whisper, and Sinclair had to strain his ears to the utmost to distinguish his last words.

It was the name of a square that he uttered—the name of the square where the cabman had vanished apparently without reason, and where later he had been beaten into insensibility.

Stein! That was the cabman with the long black beard, and it was Stein whom he had seen that very afternoon digging up the turf at the foot of a tall elm on one side of the square!

Sinclair sprang to his feet with a shout of joy. After all, the game was not yet over, and the winning card seemed to have fallen into his hand.

"Let me see," said Sinclair to himself. "I'm going to a certain square to look for hidden treasure. I do not wish to build any castles in the air either. So I shall not be satisfied with one search.

"I may as well make a stop at a large hospital and make some inquiries, as it has been intimated to me that something has been hidden there.

"I am going to have chop suey this evening, so that will take up some of my time.

"Then I shall cross over the ferry. It ought to result in bringing some very important facts to light."

DEMAND VETO TO STOP STEAL OF NEW BRIDGE

In the grab of the Northern Avenue Bridge by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Mayor George A. Hibbard has the chance to save the city of Boston and the taxpayers of Boston $800,000.

Since the BOSTON AMERICAN, editorially and in its news columns, exposed the grab by the New Haven of this bridge when eleven aldermen gave the $800,000 structure away, protests by letter and telegram have been pouring in by the hundred to the Mayor's office.

Unite in Mighty Protest.

Industrial, commercial and labor interests of Boston are uniting in a mighty protest against this grab of the bridge by the New Haven, and to-day the mayor's office will receive their demand to veto this grab.

Mayor Hibbard, who was coming from his Summer home at Provincetown to inaugurate the work of the Northern avenue bridge by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, sent a notice to his secretary, James White, stating that he would not be in Boston until next Monday.

He also says that he will await the report of the Finance Commission before acting on the matter. The report of the commission will be had soon, as the Mayor feels has until next Friday, when he will either have to veto the order or allow it to become law.

The great steel Northern avenue bridge, 2,000 feet long and eighty feet in width, which is nearing completion, and connecting Oliver street and Atlantic avenue with the docks of the New Haven just over the Fort Point channel, has cost Boston a fortune.

Yet last Monday eleven Aldermen voted to give the New Haven the right to lay their railroad freight tracks across the bridge, and this valuable privilege the generous Aldermen voted to the New Haven as a gift.

But one man, Alderman Brand, fought against this grab of the people's bridge. One voice among twelve men spoke for the people and the folly of giving away bridges, streets and everything to the railroad trust.

Ever since last May the franchise order had been pigeonholed by the aldermen's railway committee. It was not forgotten for W. Prentis Parker is a member of this committee.

There it slumbered until last Monday, when it was rushed through by the Committee on Railroads, and then by eleven aldermen while Boston was thought to be sleeping.

One Voice in Protest.

Alderman Brand alone protested. Since the franchise has been rushed through several other aldermen have repented themselves, and now they appeal to the Mayor to save the people's property which they voted to give away.

Alderman Brand said, when he alone fought the grab: "There is no occasion for hasty action. We do not know what this railroad will do with its franchise. Boston would be powerless to correct any abuses that might arise from blockades or delays on a costly bridge paid for by the people.

"The corporation seeking this franchise has not paid a single dollar toward the cost of the Northern Avenue Bridge. They do not even offer to pay a dollar now for the perpetual right to use, day in and day out, this costly bridge which the people are paying for. It might be advisable to do so.

"The Finance Commission has begun an investigation of the giving away of this bridge to the railroad. The Railroad Commission of the State is to hold a hearing next week. Alderman Donnelly admits that he would change his vote could he grant a franchise for a limited term of years. It might be inadvisable to grant it at all. We should, at least hesitate, until the facts can be carefully looked into."

We should, at least hesitate, until the facts can be carefully looked into."

Veto This Bridge Steal, Mr. Mayor!

Eleven Aldermen of the city of Boston voted to present the $800,000 Northern avenue bridge absolutely free to Charles Sanger Mellen and his New Haven Railroad for all time.

Alderman Brand, alone protested against this GRAB of the bridge the people built, by the Railroad Trust.

MAYOR HIBBARD CAN SAVE THE BRIDGE FOR THE PEOPLE. VETO THIS GRAB, MR. MAYOR!

Telephone Talks

Household business before pleasure. "Telephone visits" on party lines need not be curtailed, but your service would be improved if they were made in conventional visiting hours.

"Rush Hours"

No other public service is called upon to meet such extraordinary fluctuations of demand as is the telephone. The "rush hours" of trolley and steam roads represent, by comparison, a demand that is steady and moderate.

Moreover, during the transportation "rush hour" crush some people must stand, or, if they insist upon having a seat, must wait for less crowded cars.

In telephoning, however, the simile would be applied by stating that each "passenger" must have, not a seat, but a "special car," and that this car must have a "special motorman and conductor," and the absolute right of way over a "special pair of rails" from the point where its journey begins to the point where it ends.

In telephone exchanges the "rush hours" usually are those between 8.30 and 11 A. M. It is during this period that party-line subscribers are apt to be most troubled by "busy" reports.

It would materially help the service of subscribers on such lines if calls that are not imperative—social calls, for example—were deferred to the afternoon, leaving the morning hours free for domestic business calls.

It would be well if party-line users would keep in mind this fact—that while any one subscriber on it is talking, it is closed to every other person connected therewith, and also to every person desirous of communicating with him or with any other person on that line.

BY DYKE CLARK.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, July 10.—Before the Naps could shake the dust of the Hub the Red Sox wanted one more victory which would give them three out of four games and prevent the Forest City team from breaking even in the series.

The Naps appeared as if entirely recovered from the shock of the reverses to the first part of the series and were prepared to make the final game the hottest of the whole lot, and there have been some pretty warm ones shuffled off.

The visitors had sort of become used to the misfortunes that have followed in the wake of the team recently and went at their little job of slaying the Red Sox with all the confidence of real pennant winners.

Hanging over the heads of the Naps was the serious question of losing third place in the race if disaster came their way at the hands of the Red Sox, and the thought of losing a position which might mean more sitting backwards than Lajoie and his men to greater zeal than ever.

On one hand the Red Sox battled to free from their lowly berth and if such a outfit enlisted to the team that there would be no limit to the attendance in the future games if they would continue to knock down the high-class clubs, while the Naps, heralded as candidates for the pennant, and endeavoring to shake the disappointments of former years, struggled manfully to get all the reward possible in this, their Eastern pilgrimage.

Sizing the teams up outside of the box, there was no excuse for the Red Sox falling to gain the upper hand, as they had the regular staff working, while the Naps were obliged to shift positions.

Cy Morgan, who nearly beat the Naps in their own town on the last trip, boiling by a single hit, had the chance of his life time to get even, and the way he mowed them down in the former contest gave good reason to suppose that he would follow it up with better results on this occasion.

Lajoie was doubtful regarding the ability of Lieberott to hold the Red Sox at bay, as they pounded him hard enough the last time they faced him, while Joss won two games from the same team on the home grounds and was perfectly willing to try it again.

NOTES OF THE GAME

Wagner did the most work in the Red Sox infield, and cleaned up some savage looking ground swats.

The Naps got even with Cy Young for previous defeats.

Cheek put a check on the Red Sox winning streak.

But three hits were made off Burchell in four innings and not a man reached second.

Tao only pass credited against him was due to Burtell's poor eyesight on strikes.

It was a swell crowd that turned out. The local fans know when the diamond candy is on the card.

Cheek had a puzzling cross fire delivery which bothered the Red Sox batters a lot.

Josh Clarke acted like a man in a daze when he misjudged McConnell's fly. He hardly had to move from his position to capture it.

Cheek was so surprised when Cy Young attempted to steal third while he held the ball that he almost forgot to throw to the plate.

If Thomas had got that three-bagger of Bradley's it would have been a wonderful catch and saved a run or two.

Digby Bell, the famous actor-fan, sat in the front row of the stand. He stopped over on his way up the coast.

Nig Clarke got his throwing hand smashed from a foul tip off Wagner's bat and had to retire in favor of Bemis.

Three times Young got batters on strikes by pitching only three balls.

Bill Bradley was too game by his heavy stick work and scored three of his team's four runs.

The members of the Boston team are wearing red socks with their street clothes these days. It is a clever advertising scheme having fitted out all the players with a supply of brilliant hosiery.

Lajoie was seen at his best in the field. He had twelve chances without a miss.

RACE MEETING BOOKED FOR HILLSGROVE

William T. Parker, secretary of Hillsgrove, R. I., race track, feels confident that his meeting of July 21-24 inclusive will be a success, as the horsemen all over New England, besides letters received from New York States and elsewhere from owners and trainers, are to the effect that they will be here with him and soul for the improvement of the light harness horse sport in this section.

It is reported that Nashua, N. H., finding that their advertised meeting was to come the same week as Hillsgrove, have declared it off, the reason being that the promoters back of the New Hampshire course did not care to buck against a person like Parker. This is surely a feeling of sportsmanship to be commended.

Following is the list of classes at Hillsgrove, entries to which close next Tuesday, July 14, but records made that day will not be counted a bar:

July 21—2:30 trot, purse $300; 2:12 pace, purse $300; 2:30 pace, purse $300.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Cincinnati, July 10.—Joe Kelley and his band of Boston players came along to-day for another series with the Reds. Local fans figure the Doves and Reds about on a par as far as baseball ability is concerned, but the managers of the two teams do their calculating in a different manner. Each manager thinks he has the better club. The present series may settle the question.

It was a cloudy day, but the weather was not as warm as it has been lately, and the teams were ready to go at full speed. Kelley said he was out to win every game, but even if his team did so it would not place Boston in the first division, although they would be mighty close to it.

It looked as though Ewing and Ferguson would each pitch a game in the box, as both men warmed up.

Doves May Get Spade.

Bob Spade, the pitcher that was stirred up all Cincinnati, owing to the fact that the local club asked for waivers on him, may become the property of the Boston Nationals. Boston refused to waive on Spade. New York refused to waive on him Wednesday and the Cincinnati Club was about ready to turn Spade over to them when Boston stepped in. The matter will be decided between New York and Boston to-day, the lot drawing process being put into effect. Each team will therefore have an equal chance.

Cincinnati secured Spade at the end of last season from Atlanta. The early part of this season found him not going so well, but since waivers were asked on him he has defeated Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis and New York in succession and looked like the best pitcher on the Cincinnati staff.

No release in years has created more disruption among the fans than this one. The reason for the waivers was that Spade was to be turned over to Harrisburg in return for Doescher, but when the waivers were refused and Spade pitcher and a cash consideration satisfied Harrisburg's demands.

POLO AT HAMILTON.

There will be polo matches for the Lucy Cup at the Myopia Hunt Club, at Hamilton, to-morrow afternoon, beginning at 4 o'clock.

BATTLER WINS A FORTUNE BY VICTORY

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Sport promoters estimate that Battling Nelson "clinched" between $30,000 and $35,000 by his great victory over Joe Gans in this city last Saturday.

The betting was 10 to 4 against Nelson, and it has just developed that the lighting whirlwind covered a lot of these wagers with his own good money.

Nelson made a "killing" off Benny Selig, Gans' manager, betting that over-confident promoter to a standstill on Selig's own propositions.

There is lots of talk to-day about another match with Gans, and a challenge to Nelson has been received from Joe Mitchell, but Nelson says he wants time to count his money.

"My share of the purse was not a very small part of the money I won," says Battling. "I was confident from the time that the match was made that I would win, and I put down my money every dollar I could muster.

"I could retire right now and live comfortably the rest of my life on my winnings."

WILL GO TO MERCERSBURG.

Charles Heernie, one of the best all-round athletes that ever represented Haverhill High School, has decided to enter Mercersburg Academy in Pennsylvania next September. Heernie captained the baseball team at Haverhill High this Spring and won the championship of the Interscholastic Athletic and Boston High School Leagues.

RIGHT-HANDERS LEAD PITCHERS IN AMERICAN

Tom "Bill" Donovan of Detroit and Pitcher of the Browns, are tactics, a merry race for the pitching honors in the American League. Neither man has lost a game this season, and each has won seven games. This is a wonderful record for both pitchers, and it begins to look as though it will be the survival of the fittest.

There are two other pitchers with a clean record, Foley of the Browns and "Jack" Coombs of the Athletics, each having taken ten without a defeat being chalked up against their names. Of the five different pitchers there is not a single left-hander in the aggregation, which proves the assertion made in this column some time ago that the southpaw would have more trouble against the American League batsmen this season.

Only once a club was never perfect unless a left-hander or two were carried along, but slow-footers have cost their of owners dear with the exception of one or two clubs, notably Washington and Boston. But there was a time when a left-hander would have St. Louis, Chicago and Detroit batters standing on their heads, and this was also true in Cleveland, but that is a thing of the past. A left-hander is the very last thing in the line of a right-hander. That is the reason why the American League clubs were loath to pay a fancy price for "Rube" Marquard, who is about to have been sold to the New York Giants for $11,000.

FAST TROTTERS MEET IN RACE AT READVILLE

READVILLE RACE TRACK, July 10.—With no time an afternoon, and the attendance of seeing three of the fastest trotters in the world contest for the championship, it was not surprising that shortly after 1 o'clock the roads leading to the park were filled with automobiles, and teams, while the trolleys brought in loads of spectators from nearby places. The special train from Boston, too, had its full quota of fandom.

With all the conditions perfect for fast time, the tip was out that all trotting records for July would go past the board, the drivers being confident in the ability of their stars to sep a couple of remarkable heats, and more should the event happen to be split up.

Alfa McDonald, Billy Andrews and Trainer Stelle each worked their pets three warming up miles before the start of the race. So far as could be noticed Major Delmar, Sweet Marie and Willesbeart were in the best possible condition, each moving in their work with that elastic stride denoting all freedom from muscle soreness.

Sandwiched with the big free-for-all trot was decided the natthee program of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Readville, and the spectators were quite enthusiastic in watching the prominent amateur drivers strive for leading honors in these races.

AUTO TOURISTS OFF EARLY FOR PITTSBURG

By J. C. KERRISON.

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, Pa., July 10.—The cars and locally pushed its face on the eastern horizon before the competitors, observers, mechanics, tourists and newspaper men on the A. A. A. tour were astir and preparing for the second day of work.

As early as 5 o'clock the two confetti cars, Premier and Reo were on their way to Pittsburg, 123 miles away, strewing the varied colored confetti that guides the competing cars. An hour later the pacemaker Pope-Toledo and then came the others followed half an hour later by the competitors.

The two Stevens-Duryea cars which are competing for certificates have been given the right of way over others as they carry the officials whose early presence at the finish is necessary. This does not however, give them any advantage over others as they are being in competition for the trophy.

The Pierce team was again the first to get away, it evidently believing that the early bird catches the worm. Gardner likes not to take the dust of others, and result the BOSTON AMERICAN is always in the lead. The Marmon and Studebaker cars are also often come the early rising movement on hand, but whether whatever on Mrs. Marmon, who is accompanying her husband on this trip.

The women of the tour were all among the early risers, and none was more enthusiastic over the meeting of Pittsburg than were Mrs. Cuneo and Mrs. Shiverick, both of Boston and flower recipients respectively.

Following the private events the men give them every consideration imaginable, but in a lesser extent than the men grant to each other. The rivalry at the Pierce is all good-natured, and one is sorry for the mishaps that happen to each another. Will it continue? The test is yet young, and many hardships are to be encountered before Saratoga is reached.

Yesterday's run there was comparatively little tire trouble, and speaking about tires brings to mind the fact that more cars are equipped with the Goodrich tire than any one other company.

Some slight changes have been made in the route from Pittsburg. The mileage has been cut down a little, roads are admirably laid and the routes numerous. Life lines have been placed on the majority of vehicles, and all look for a hard, tough ride over the mountains at an average rate of eighteen miles per hour, as called for by the schedule.

SPECIAL PRIZES FOR RECORDS

World's records in several events will in all likelihood go to smithereens at the Scotch picnic on Saturday, August 8, as a result of the order of the games committee of the Caledonian Club, of an added $25 for each world's record smashed in any of the forty odd events on the program. Alfred Shrubb, world's champion runner, is to compete, there is a strong likelihood that he will attack the three-mile record, while Leroy Samse, formerly of Yale, but now an amateur pole vaulting record, will try to establish professional figures in his specialty.

Special arrangements will be made to secure for those making them the official recognition of all marks created, the officials in charge of these events being well versed in the rules and became of their ability and experience in the athletic world.

DOVER MEET TO WIND UP WITH RACES TO-DAY

DOVER, N. H., July 10.—Excitement again prevailed at the second day's start of the three days' light harness race meeting at Granite State Park here yesterday, but of a different order than that of the preceding day. The programme called for a 2:22 pace and a 2:25 trot, both for purses of $500.

To-day a free-for-all pace will head the bill, and the meet will be brought to a close with a 2:14 trot. Arrow, the noted bay gelding owned by George Keller of Boston will start in the free-for-all.

STARVED AND DESPERATE, BEG TO GO TO JAIL

Edward Walsh and Charles Reardon Invite Sentence by Deliberate Offence.

Edward Walsh and Charles Reardon today began serving a sentence of eight days each in Deer Island for trespassing upon property belonging to the Boston Elevated Company in Roxbury. The charge was only technical. The men literally broke into jail.

Declaring they were desperate from want of food, and that they could find no kind of honest employment, although they had searched everywhere, the pair accosted Patrolman Palmer in Roxbury yesterday afternoon and asked to be locked up.

"We're starved," said one of them. "We're discouraged. Both have families, too."

The patrolman ordered them on. They insisted on being arrested.

"We've got to have something to get in jail," declared the spokesman. "We'll steal or do something. We'd even knock you down, if necessary."

Again Palmer ordered them away, and they refused to go. Opposite where the men stood was the Boston Elevated property, inclosed by a high board fence, on which was printed a warning against trespassing.

"There's our chance," said Walsh. "If we trespass and that paper, will we be arrested?" Palmer nodded in assent.

Then all is well, they said, and, suiting their actions to the threat, the pair vaulted the fence, walked around the property and then waited for the officer to take them into custody. Again the men were given the alternative of paying a fine of $5 each or going to jail.

They went to jail.

Walsh and Reardon are each thirty years old.

$250,000 IN TOILET GIFTS TO WOMEN

Everything is in readiness for the free distribution next Monday by the Dr. Charles Flesh Food Company of Brooklyn of $250,000 worth of the company's toilet preparations among the women of Boston and suburbs, as per notice that distributing stations will be printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. A coupon printed from the SUNDAY AMERICAN will entitle every purchaser of one bottle of Dr. Charles's Face Powder to two other presentations, free of cost.

The company announces that this will be the only opportunity Boston will have to sample its goods for nothing. The supply of free goods to be distributed, although seemingly abundant, will not last long after the distribution begins, therefore the company advises that all women interested make prompt application.

The new book, "The Art of Massage, which gives valuable information and instruction regarding beauty, is being given free of cost to purchasers, to all who make application for it by mail or otherwise at the Brooklyn office.

Better Listen to Hobson Than Laugh at Him

He Deserves More Than Jeers When He Seeks to Awaken Us

Richmond Pearson Hobson went to Denver to talk about the need of a navy great enough to make impossible a war with Japan or with any other Power. Mr. Hobson knew what he was talking about, and his speech before the Committee on Resolutions was serious and full of startling information.

Yet, even when he quoted the President of the United States to the effect that there exists the greatest possibility of a war with Japan his words were received with derision.

A more serious reception Hobson's speech surely deserved, and in according it the delegates would have reflected more credit on their intelligence and on their patriotism.

Mr. Hobson was a real hero in a real war. He has served in the navy, both in the line and in the construction department, and he has been a close student of foreign affairs, particularly relating to naval matters.

He asserts, and avers his readiness to supply proof of his assertion, that since her war with Russia Japan has ordered $125,000,000 worth of battleships; that to her army she has added five divisions; that she has bought from American factories 75,000 rifles; that in four days she can embark 200,000 troops, landing 400,000 on our Pacific coast in four months and a million in a year; that she will soon have ready eight new battleships, any one the equal in effectiveness to the greatest of ours.

These are grave matters, and they have been considered as such by the President and the Secretary of War. One result of Mr. Hobson's earnestness is the presence of our fleet in the Pacific.

That has stopped—temporarily—the talk of a war with Japan.

But until we are ready to maintain a fleet in those waters, and a fleet that no nation would care to attack, war clouds will continue to gather, and there will be little security for the people of the Western coast line.

Congress has refused to supply such a navy as the country needs. Congress must do so eventually, for preparedness is the only way to avert a war, and this is a peace-loving nation.

Hobson and the men who really know the dangers that threaten us, and who will take no rest until they shall be removed, are sorely deserving of more than jeers from the politicians whom they seek to awake to the country's need.

No More Credit for the Newport Millionaires!

The leading grocer of Newport announces that in future persons desiring provender from his meat boxes, vegetable crates and canned goods department must come forward with the cash. There is to be no credit. Having catered to the rich, the nobility and the exclusive families residing there in Summer, with journal and ledger flung wide open, he finds enough accounts on hand to keep an entire collection agency's force busy for weeks to come.

Hereafter when the "missus" sends to the grocer for a dollar's worth of tea, a bar of soap, a bag of bluing, a dime's worth of pepper and a peck of potatoes she will have to accompany the order with that which will pass at banks as current exchange. Beef for the bulldogs, truffles for the chimpanzees, the tongues of peacocks for Tabby and spiced pears for the Shetland ponies remain at the same old stand and at the same old prices; and they will stay there, too, unless cash accompanies each demand for their removal.

It's a good rule—the cash system—as this Newport merchant has discovered. There was once a Westerner who had this sign conspicuously posted in his establishment: "To trust is to bust; to bust is—well. No trust, no bust; no bust makes Jack a good boy."

How distressing it is to be rich and in society! Still between here and Newport it is said the huckleberry crop grows fine this year, and if worse comes to worst, Newport can pick its way back to the city, where frankfurters sell for twenty cents a pound and sauerkraut at $4 a barrel.

Rich or Poor, Which?

By Winifred Black

I KNOW two sisters. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Robinson, I'll call them.

People say that Mrs. Johnson is rich, and that her sister, Mrs. Robinson, is poor.

I'll tell you about them and see what you think.

Mrs. Johnson is pretty and her husband is a rich man. Mrs. Robinson is plain and her husband is a clerk on a small salary.

I met the two women at a luncheon the other day.

"Isn't it lovely about Mrs. So and So," said some one at the table. "Her husband is taking her abroad for a year, and you know she's always been so crazy to go."

"Oh," cried Mrs. Robinson, her plain face radiant with sympathetic joy. "Isn't that beautiful! She's just the woman who ought to have a thing like that happen to her. I must stop by as I go home and tell her how glad I am."

Mrs. Johnson's pretty face clouded.

"Isn't it queer how some people have all the luck," she said. "I've been trying to get that trip to Europe for five years and it isn't in sight yet."

"Have you heard that Blanche Thus and So is engaged to that disagreeable Englishman with so much money?" said some one at the other end of the table. Mrs. Robinson's eyes sparkled.

"Yes," she said. "She'll show them what a real American girl is over there. Isn't she pretty?"

Mrs. Johnson's soft mouth twisted in a satirical smile. "I don't see what there is in her to rave over," she said. "I never saw her with a decent dress on in my life."

And so it was all through the luncheon. The only thing that made Mrs. Johnson look happy was some piece of bad news about some one else. Rich—why, I wouldn't go through life with a disposition like that for all the money in all the mines that were ever discovered.

Rich—pretty—and her heart eaten with envy.

Poor, I call her, poor and ugly and miserable and a failure.

The next time I met Mr. Johnson I knew what the discouraged look on his face meant, and when I saw Mr. Robinson I understood why he looked as if life was a good deal of fun for him.

Poor! As if any one with a kind heart could ever be poor when there are so many friends to rejoice with!

Rich! As if any one could ever be rich who sees them live with envy and malice and jealousy for company!

Poor Mrs. Johnson, I am not rich Mrs. Robinson. What do you think?

Little Editorials from the People

PUNISH AUTO MURDERERS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have been waiting for years to see some editor with enough courage to write an article like the inclosed on automobile murders. But I have noticed that you generally come to the centre on all timely and important subjects. There is one suggestion that I wish to make, and that is, I would, in addition to making this kind of criminal carelessness punishable as manslaughter, impose a penalty of one year's imprisonment for the automobile owner or driver who runs away and leaves his victim in the road without stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage and to inform the victim as to who was responsible for the injuries. Now here is something to be accomplished that is good—really good—that any fair-minded person would like to see a law and enforced. An additional fine of $1,000 might also be imposed with good results, one-half to go to the informer or the one who apprehends the criminal; but make the one year in the pen a minimum, with no pardon, no immunity, no escape.

Why, in the name of common humanity, reason and justice, should it not be done?

A Wandering Unknown

By Wex Jones

SCENE III.—At the Bottom of the Sea.

THE diver descended slowly through the translucent green water.

He was alone in the vast silences of the ocean.

He wished he was back where he could get a bottle of beer.

Suddenly a huge dark object loomed before his startled gaze.

It was a giant octopus!

The monster fastened its tentacles around the diver. In vain the victim struggled; the grasp merely tightened around him, and it was but a question of seconds when he would drown.

At this moment the despairing man's bulging eyes perceived dimly an approaching object.

It was a man armed to the teeth!

With a few swift strokes the newcomer reached the scene of the struggle, and, with a deftness born of some practice, throttled the octopus!

Reaching the surface, the diver gasped: "Who are you?"

"I"—replied the stranger—"I am Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States."

* * *

SCENE IV.—On the Mountain Peak.

Wearily the little band of mountaineers pressed up the steep slopes of the Skycrasperhorn, unheeding the taunts of the little urchins who yodeled in purest Swiss.

"Get a balloon!"

Not a member of the party was forced to climb mountains for a living. Each was doing it for amusement. Three of the original party had already amused themselves all they could stand, having fallen over a 500-foot precipice during the ascent of Mont Pink.

Carelessly passing a frozen youth, whose icy hand still grasped a banner with the strange device "Excelsior," and melting the snow before them—with safety matches, to avoid a conflagration—the mountaineers joyfully yodeled their greetings to the summit, which now showed close above them. To their intense amazement, a voice replied from the extreme pinnacle of the Skycrasperhorn.

"Who are you?" bellowed all the members of the party together.

"I"—replied the strange figure, flourishing a brotherless alpenstock—"I am Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States."

* * *

SCENE V.—In the Shadow of Pike's Peak.

All was silence in the great Democratic convention hall.

One could have heard a tray of glassware drop.

Colonel McGruffy had just concluded a ringing speech and was about to place in nomination the unknown then concealed behind a curtain.

Pulling aside the hunting he disclosed a kingly figure.

"Who are you" cried the delegates.

"I"—replied the unknown—"I am Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States."

WORK BEYOND

May Not the Spirits of Those Whose Ideals Are Unselfish Continue Achieving After Death?

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

HOW frequently we express pity and sorrow for the man who dies with some work undone, some hope unfulfilled, some dream unrealized. How seldom do we hear the most religious person speak of the possibility of finishing our labors after we pass out of the body.

Creeds religious creeds have become; there still lingers in the average mind the old idea of eternal rest or eternal song in a realm wholly away from this sphere as the reward for earth's toilers. Yet, it is the belief of many that a worthy, unselfish ambition or a great undertaking for universal good is almost always carried on after the spirit leaves earth, and that by its unfettered condition it is able to aid humanity as it was not permitted to do in the body.

There was a man who lived in New York City nearly all his life of forty-five years, and who died but a few years since. This man had the world's good and the world's need at heart, and was forever seeing the things which needed amending, and forever lifting his voice to friend and acquaintance, calling attention to the worth of great principles and the necessity of great reforms.

Spirit Still at Work

UNFORTUNATELY the man was aggressive and devoid of tact in his methods, and as a rule he succeeded only in antagonizing his listeners instead of converting them to his ideas.

He was a man unknown to fame, living a quiet life and pursuing a modest business career. But his heart was as large as the world and his mind was loyal to justice.

Since the great excitement caused by certain magazine articles exposing the very evils which he attacked, the thought has often come to mind that perhaps the lifelong desire of this man, who passed away full of sorrow and indignation over these wrongs, had been utilized from the other shore, and that he had been one of the instruments in the hands of Divine Justice in bringing the minds of others to know what he had so long known.

The transition to the realm beyond had been needed that he might cast off his unpleasant and aggressive habits and focus the full power of his spirit upon this cause.

George an Example

JUST so, it seems to me, the spirit of that great and honored teacher, Henry George, has gone on working for the cause so dear to his heart.

"How sad," I have heard it said, "that Henry George died without knowing the wonderful success of his theories in the single tax colony at Fair Hope, Ala., where they have been put to practical use, and of the steady progress that is being made elsewhere in the same line."

But to me it is far more reasonable to think that magnificent mind has been actively at work, though on another plane, producing the results he desired.

Since wireless telegraphy is an established fact it seems less difficult to think a disembodied intelligence may be sending its powerful messages to sympathetic souls on earth.

If you have a cherished ambition which means good to the world, if you are engaged in some labor which will help humanity, do not be saddened by the thought of death.

The separation from your body may only increase your power of usefulness toward the world you leave.

If, however, your ambitions are wholly mundane and selfish, then indeed may you be sad. If you want money in order to shine socially; if you want power or fame, that men may seek you; if you want to live more sumptuously than your neighbor or to give more expensive entertainments, or to board up millions for posterity, do th, in truth, will prove your undoing.

For money and jewels and fine clothes cannot accompany the spirit upon its journey, nor can the spirit carry on such worthless work beyond the realm.

Death Not the End

BUT the worker whose ideals are unselfish and universal in their purpose need not fear the end of endeavor when his eyes close upon this mortal scene. Instead, let him believe in a larger life, and a greater usefulness and an increased power.

And let him be comforted by the thought that those dear to him, who were cut down by the scythe of Death before realizing their aspirations, are carrying on their purposes to completion under better conditions and aiding others here on earth to do similar work.

What more beautiful idea of heaven can be conceived than this privilege of inspiring our spiritual kin on earth to carry forward and complete our cherished ideals. And what an incentive to those on earth to live close to the Unseen that the messages may be received when transmitted.

I know we are building our heaven As we journey along by the way, And the mansion at last shall be given To us as we shape it to-day.
